This tutorial will show you how to link your subpage (the schedule) to your main page (Arts Extravaganza) using a "Secondary Navigation."
Let's go back to Bricolage. In the AE edit desk, we can see our main page (Arts Extravaganza - Index) and our sub page (Arts Extravaganza - Schedule).

Let's create the Secondary Navigation (sometimes referred to as a "Right Navigation") to link these two pages together.

Now we need to create the link that will connect the main page to the sub page.
This is the "Element Profile" for the "Menu Tree."

Select: "Menu Heading - Link"
Give this "menu heading" the title of the page to which you want to link. In this case, it will be "Schedule."
Now let’s include the url of the Arts Extravaganza schedule page.

From the previous tutorial, we know that the full address (in the test environment) is:

http://test2.adams.edu/artextravaganza/schedule/schedule.php

But here we only need to use:

/artextravaganza/schedule/schedule.php

/artextravaganza = name of the site
/schedule = slug for the subpage
/schedule.php = name of the subpage
Now let's add a "tooltip." When the user places her mouse over the link, the "tooltip" will give her information on the link.
Now let's preview the Secondary Nav in the test environment.
Unfortunately, only the subheader "Menu" appears in the preview environment.

The "Menu Tree" is a javascript that won't appear when the Secondary Nav is previewed.

It's important, however, to preview the secondary nav in order to upload the latest version onto the test server.
Here's a way to view the "Right Nav"

Our Location

Adams State College is located in Alamosa, Colorado, a city of 10,000 people. Situated in the San Luis Valley, a valley the size of the state of Connecticut located in south central Colorado, the campus is surrounded by the breathtaking beauty of the Sangre de Cristo and San Juan mountain ranges. With towering peaks of over 14,000 feet, the mountains provide a variety of winter and summer sports and account for the brisk winter nights and sun-filled days for which the Valley is known. A sense of history and adventure unique to the Southwest creates an environment conducive to both academic and social growth.

Alamosa is serviced by United Express and bus service. Denver is 220 miles to the north, and Albuquerque, New Mexico, is 200 miles to the south. Within a two-hour drive are five ski areas and such historic towns as Taos, Santa Fe, and Creede. For more in-depth information about our community, visit Alamosa.org, sponsored by the Alamosa Tourism Development Board.
