TUITION CLASSIFICATION INFORMATION

SUMMARY OF TUITION CLASSIFICATION REGULATIONS

- In-state status requires domicile (legal, primary residence) in Colorado for the year immediately preceding the first day of class. The only exceptions to this requirement as provided by law, are for active-duty military personnel on permanent duty station in Colorado, and for Olympic athletes in training at the U.S. Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, CO.

- Domicile is defined as your true, fixed and permanent home and place of habitation. Domicile is a legal characteristic that everyone has, and you can only have one domicile at any one time. It is your legal primary residence.

- If Colorado is not your parents’ domiciliary, you must be a qualified person to begin the one-year domiciliary period. A qualified person is someone who is either at least 22 years old, or married, or emancipated, or a graduate student. Persons who are not citizens of the United States should read the section regarding aliens on page 2 for additional information.

- You must be a qualified person to be eligible to establish a Colorado domicile and begin the one-year domiciliary period. Adults, emancipated minors, and graduate students are qualified persons.

- Unemancipated minors are eligible for in-state tuition if at least one parent or court-appointed guardian has been domiciled in Colorado for one year. A minor is a person less than age 23.

- Emancipation requires that your parents cannot provide financial support of any nature for any purpose. Parental support includes funds your parents may have previously set aside for your current support, even if those funds are in your name. Parents may provide reasonable incidental gifts consistent with emancipation, but may not provide significant funds that would be characteristic of a continuing parent-child support relationship.

- To begin the one-year domiciliary period, a qualified person must be residing in Colorado with the present intention to reside permanently in Colorado. To demonstrate this intention, you should take actions that would be expected of any permanent resident of Colorado in your circumstances. These actions include severing from your former state of domicile such connections as voter registration, driver license, vehicle registration, employment, and income tax filing, and establishing these connections to Colorado.

- Your in-state eligibility will be lost if you or your parents (depending on your age and parental support) maintain domicile outside Colorado for one year. However, if you are an unemancipated minor, you may retain in-state status if your parents have lived in Colorado for at least four years (see FOUR YEAR RULE on page 2). Regaining in-state status requires a new one-year domiciliary period. During this one-year period, you should comply with all legal obligations of a Colorado resident, despite being classified as out-of-state or a nonresident, for tuition purposes. You may be enrolled in school and you may live in campus housing during this time.

- You may leave the state for vacations or other temporary reasons and need not maintain a residence in Colorado during a temporary absence. To maintain Colorado domicile during the temporary absence, you should keep Colorado connections, particularly voter registration and declaration of any out-of-state income on your Colorado state income tax return. On any other state tax return, you must file as a nonresident. However, residing in your previous home state for a substantial period of time (including summer) is some evidence of continued domicile in that place, although such residence does not by itself disqualify you for in-state status.

QUALIFIED PERSON

You must be a qualified person to be eligible to establish a Colorado domicile and begin the one-year domiciliary period. Adults, emancipated minors, and graduate students are qualified persons.

ADULTS

You are eligible to establish domicile and begin the one-year domiciliary period if you are at least 22 years old, or are married, or are emancipated from your parents, or a graduate student. Persons not qualified are unemancipated minors and assume the domicile of their parents or court-appointed legal guardian. Adult students cannot qualify for in-state tuition through their parents, with the following exception: Because in-state status is lost only after a year of domicile elsewhere, adult students less than age 23 may be able to qualify through their parents. Consult the Tuition Classification Officer for additional information.

EMANCIPATED MINORS

You are an emancipated minor if you are less than 23 years old and if your parents have entirely surrendered the right to your care, custody and earnings; and if they are no longer under any duty to support you and have made no provisions for your support. This means they cannot provide you with financial support of any nature for any ordinary or necessary purpose. Parental support includes but is not limited to, gifts and loans (including PLUS loans) that you depend on for financial support. Trust funds or other assets established by your parents before the one-year domiciliary period are regarded as evidence of non-emancipation if circumstances indicate that the funds or assets were intended, or could reasonably have been expected, to provide support for the period you claim to be emancipated. If you are an emancipated minor granted in-state tuition status, you are subject to reclassification as an out-of-state resident if your parents resume support.

TAX DEPENDENCE

If federal support requirements are met, your parents may claim you as a dependent for tax purposes during a given year if emancipation commences after the beginning of that year. For example, you can be recognized as emancipated as of August if your parents cease support at that time, even though they claim you as a dependent for that year. They cannot claim you as a dependent for following years.

INSURANCE

You may be covered under your parents’ health and automobile insurance if you pay all costs associated with your premiums and deductibles.

MARRIED STATUS

If you are married, you are emancipated regarding parental support, but marriage to a Colorado resident does not by itself qualify you for in-state tuition status. Although such a marriage may be considered some evidence of intent, you must still maintain your own Colorado domicile for one year.

UNEMANCIPATED MINORS

If you are less than 23 years old and depend on your parents for financial support, you are an unemancipated minor. Unemancipated minors must qualify for in-state tuition through their parents or court-appointed legal guardians. As an unemancipated minor, you qualify for in-state tuition if either of your parents, regardless of custody, has been domiciled in Colorado for the one year preceding the first day of class, even though you may reside elsewhere. The parent-child relationship must exist for one year.

FOUR YEAR RULE

If your parents (or court-appointed legal guardians) maintain Colorado domicile for 4 years and then establish domicile elsewhere, you will remain eligible for in-state tuition if:

a. Your parents leave Colorado after your junior year of high school and if you enroll at a Colorado public college or university within 3 years and six months after your parents leave Colorado

b. You maintain continuous Colorado domicile. This provision will generally be met if you continue to reside in Colorado after your parents leave or if you reside outside the state only temporarily (for example to attend college or for military service) while maintaining Colorado domiciliary connections such as voter registration and income tax filing as described under the heading “Colorado Domicile” below.

GUARDIANSHIPS

You may qualify for in-state tuition through the domicile of a Colorado guardian, only if your guardian has legal custody as defined by Colorado Revised Statutes SS19-1-103 (73). The court appointing the guardianship must certify that the primary purpose of the appointment is not to qualify the student for in-state tuition. The court must also certify that your parents do not provide substantial financial support. The guardianship must be in effect for one year to qualify for in-state status.

ALIENS

Persons who are lawful permanent residents or who are admitted as refugees are eligible to establish domicile for tuition purposes. Nonimmigrant aliens who are residing in Colorado for purposes other than education may qualify for in-state status after one year of Colorado residence. Nonimmigrants in the following student categories cannot qualify for in-state tuition: F-1, F-2, H-3, H-4 (if the visa holder is the spouse or child of an H-3), J-2 and J-3 (if the J-1 visa holder is student or trainee), M-1 and M-2.

MILITARY PERSONNEL

Active-duty members of the armed forces of the United States and Canada on either PCS or TDY orders in Colorado and their dependents (as defined by military regulations) are eligible for in-state status, regardless of domicile or length of residence in Colorado. The military member must have reported to a duty station in the state, as certified by his or her military command, not later than the first day of class of the applicable academic term. Unless the student meets the requirement for domicile in Colorado for one year as detailed above, this eligibility expires as of the first term that begins after retirement, permanent change of duty status, or loss of dependent status. To retain domicile during an absence from Colorado due to military orders, military personnel must maintain Colorado as their state of legal residence for tax purposes, and voters must maintain Colorado voter registration. Military personnel may retain legal residence in their original state, or they may establish a new legal residence in a state in which they reside due to military orders. They may not establish domicile in Colorado while residing elsewhere or while being physically present in the state only on a temporary basis.

A recent Colorado House Bill 09-1039 provides additional in-state tuition eligibility for veterans or dependents who have been honorably discharged from military service.

EVIDENCE OF DOMICILE

You can establish domicile in Colorado only if you are residing in Colorado with the present intention to reside permanently in the state. Evidence of Colorado domicile includes actions that in your circumstances would normally be expected of, or that would be characteristic of, any permanent resident. For example, vehicle registration is relevant only if you have a motor vehicle. You are expected to take appropriate action on all factors relevant to your circumstances. New residents all allowed a reasonable period of time after first coming to Colorado to take appropriate actions consistent with domiciliary intent. See, for example, the time periods allowed for driver’s license and vehicle registration below. If the classification officer judges that you did not regard Colorado as your permanent home when you first came to Colorado, the one-year domicile period cannot begin until these actions are taken, absent other clear and convincing evidence of Colorado domicile.

COLORADO DOMICILE

The tuition classification officer considers the following evidence, as specified by law, and any additional relevant information, when evaluating requests for in-state tuition. Because domicile is defined as a true, fixed and permanent home, individuals who are physically present in Colorado only on a temporary basis cannot establish domicile merely by taking these actions. Establishing a new domicile requires actual residence on a permanent basis.

- Payment of Colorado state income tax (if your income is sufficient to be taxed). All taxable income accrued after you move to Colorado, regardless of source, must be reported to Colorado. You should file yearly resident returns for each state of residence for the year you moved to Colorado. For subsequent years, you should file a full-year resident Colorado return and a non-resident return for any other state in which you are required to file. For additional information, contact the Colorado Department of Revenue, 1375 Sherman Street, Denver, CO 80203; telephone 303-232-2446.

- Colorado driver’s license. If you have a driver’s license from another state, you must apply for a Colorado driver’s license within 30 days of moving to Colorado (if you are employed) or within 120 days (if unemployed). These grace periods apply only to the date you first move to Colorado. If you do not drive, you may obtain a Colorado identification card. These documents are available from the Driver’s License Division, located at 715 Sixth Street, Alamosa, CO.

- Colorado vehicle registration. If you operate a motor vehicle, you must register it in Colorado within 30 days. This grace period applies only to the date you first move to Colorado. This law applies to any vehicle you have, whether or not you are the registered owner. Contact your county clerk for vehicle registration. Alamosa County vehicle registration information is available from the County Clerk, located in the County Court-house at 402 Edison, Alamosa, CO.

- Voter registration in Colorado. You may register to vote and obtain verification of same with your county clerk, when you obtain a Colorado driver’s license, or through www.govotecolorado.com. Alamosa County voter registration information is available from the County Clerk, located in the County Courthouse at 402 Edison, Alamosa, CO.

- Permanent employment or acceptance of future permanent employment in CO.

- Ownership of residential real property in Colorado that is your primary residence. Ownership of vacation or income property is not a factor indicating domicile.

- Graduation from a Colorado high school.

- Continued residence in Colorado during the summer or during other periods when not enrolled as a student or during periods between academic sessions.

NON-COLORADO DOMICILE

The following items are evidence indicating domicile outside Colorado:

- Failure to pay Colorado state income tax (if your income is sufficient to be taxed). Income earned in another state by a resident of Colorado is taxable in Colorado. Filing a nonresident Colorado tax return is persuasive evidence of domicile outside Colorado.

- Failure to comply with any law imposing a mandatory duty on a permanent resident in Colorado. Examples include failure to register a motor vehicle and failure to change your driver’s license to Colorado within the statutory periods, as well as failure to file a Colorado state income tax return if your income is sufficient to be required to do so.

- Return to your former state of residence for a substantial period of time during the summer or during other periods when not enrolled as a student, or between academic sessions.

- Maintenance of a home in another state.

- Prolonged absence from Colorado, except for military or civilian government service or for temporary absences required by an employer. If your parents live in Colorado and if you reside outside Colorado for less than three years, this factor is not weighed against you. However, if you reside outside Colorado for one year or more, other factors may support a judgment that you have lost in-state status.

- Any other factor particular to your situation that indicates non-Colorado domicile. Examples include applying for a loan in another state where domicile in that state is a condition for granting the loan, and voting or registering to vote in another state.

OTHER MATTERS

Your initial tuition classification is determined from information you supply on your application for admission to the university. You may file a petition if you wish to contest out-of-state classification or if you believe you have subsequently become eligible for in-state status. If the tuition classification officer denies your petition, you may appeal to:

Residency Appeals Committee
c/o ASU Registrar
208 Edgemont Blvd.
Alamosa, CO 81101

Because Colorado residency status is governed solely by Colorado regulations, the fact that you might not qualify for in-state status in any other state, doesn’t guarantee in-state status in Colorado. The tuition classification statute places the burden of proof on you to provide clear and convincing evidence of eligibility. Information submitted to qualify for in-state classification is subject to independent verification. Individuals submitting false information or falsified supporting documents are subject to both criminal charges and College disciplinary proceedings.

Also check the CCHE website for any updates to residency laws and regulations for Colorado, and obtain further information on recent policy revisions for active military or veterans for in-state tuition.

I (We), ___________________________, the parent(s) of ______________________, have entirely surrendered the right to care, custody, earnings of this minor as of ________(mo/day/year).

As of and since that date, I (we) have made no provision for the financial support of this minor child. The last tax year for which he or she was claimed by me (us) as a state or federal income tax exemption was __________, and he or she will not be so claimed in this or any subsequent years. All funds provided to this minor since emancipation include __________________________________ (list dates, amounts and purposes; if none, so state). I (We) do not intend to resume financial support in any manner. I (We) have included copies of the first page of all federal income tax returns, covering the year(s) of emancipation.

The emancipation referred to herein is an absolute emancipation for all purposes whatsoever. I (We) agree that if periodic reexamination of the minor child’s status as an emancipated minor reveals that he or she may be subject to retroactive reclassification as a nonresident for tuition purposes, I (we) understand that supporting the minor or claiming the minor as a tax exemption will provide evidence for reclassification.
